The Fulbright Visiting Scholar Program for Iraq and the Fulbright Junior Faculty Development Programs (JFDPs) for Egypt and Lebanon are designed to bring junior scholars in various discipline-based cohorts to U.S. host institutions for faculty development, mentoring, and cultural exchange activities. The intent of these 10-week programs is to equip scholars with the knowledge and tools needed to build the capacity of their home institutions and to advance the education of future generations. In addition, they lay the foundation for junior scholars and their U.S. hosts to develop long-term institutional relationships and to identify areas of cooperation that can be sustained beyond the grant period.

About the Host Institutions

IIE seeks 4 U.S. institutions to implement the 10-week summer programs scheduled to be held from late June through September 2018. Approximately five to seven scholars will be placed in each of the 4 discipline-based cohorts below.

A prospective host institution should submit a proposal to host scholars in one of the above cohorts, and may apply for multiple cohorts.

Participating institutions will enjoy a unique opportunity to establish lasting relationships with faculty members at universities in the scholars’ home countries and to build upon current efforts to internationalize their campuses and surrounding communities.
Program Objectives:
• Build higher education capacity in scholars’ home countries through faculty development and mentoring for junior scholars
• Foster long-term collaboration and institutional linkages between scholars and U.S. academics
• Promote mutual understanding between scholars’ home countries and Americans by facilitating the scholars’ engagement with the broader host campus community

Program Components
• Arrival orientation
• Academic program on campus focused on teaching methodology, pedagogy, curriculum development, educational technology, leadership in education, U.S. higher education, higher education administration, academic support structures, research methodology, and grant proposal writing
• Various cultural and community engagement activities
• Scholar mentorship by U.S. host institution faculty

Funding
The host institution will receive a maximum cost-reimbursable amount of $15,300 per scholar to cover administrative, program, and housing expenses.

About the Visiting Scholars
Participating scholars will be nominated through an open, merit-based competition with final selection of scholars being made in February 2018. They will be highly motivated to engage with colleagues and others within their communities and campuses in the United States, and every effort will be made to select candidates representing a broad range of universities and regions within the four countries.

Selected scholars must meet the following criteria:
• Be a full-time university faculty member
• Hold a PhD and no more than five years of university-level teaching experience; or
• Hold an MA/MS degree with at least five years of university-level teaching experience. MA/MS degree holders currently enrolled in a doctoral program must possess at least three years of university-level teaching experience
• Fluent in spoken and written English
• Demonstrate commitment to classroom teaching and a desire to strengthen teaching and leadership skills
• Scholar’s academic focus must be in one the programs offered academic discipline cohorts
• Available to travel to the United States and participate for the duration of the program

Deadline for Host Institution Applications
