The Fulbright Scholar-in-Residence Program: A Supportive Resource for Advancing Campus Internationalization

Coastal Carolina University

Associate Provost for Global Initiatives
Overview to Our Involvement in the SIR Program

• Strong interest in being able to offer Arabic language on our campus, but no available slots to do so.
• Wonderful outcomes from our involvement with Fulbright Outreach Lecturers for short-term engagement on our campus.
• Collaborative effort from our Arts and Humanities Global Experience (AHGEP) Program leadership, in cooperation with Languages and Intercultural Studies, English, and other units on campus, and as a part of our campus-wide International Visiting Lecturer Program.
• Clear vision of how the Scholar-in-Residence program would bring value to our campus and community and help to advance further deepened engagement.
• Received our first Scholar-in-Residence, Dr. Mimouna Zitouni, in Fall 2017, from the University of Oran, Algeria
  – Fall 2017: Beginning Arabic,
Planning: Developing the Proposal

- Engage in campus dialogue to identify the set of academic expectations to which the scholar will contribute.
- Articulate clearly the required and desired experience/training that the scholar needs to have.
- Evaluate the financial model you can support with campus stakeholders.
- Evaluate whether and how you can support family members coming with the Scholar.
- Consider the outreach and support activities you can ensure the Scholar will receive.
  - Financial support for conferences, Fulbright Association meetings, materials?
- Build in expectations for clear community reach into your application.
- Demonstrate how the activity desired is supportive of an institutional strategy/commitment/vision and how you see that vision moving forward as a result of that Scholar being a part of your campus community.
Welcome: Relocating with Support

• Communicate in advance with the scholar to inform him/her/them of the progress on the activities that affect them.
  – Hiring paperwork – what do they need to do? What is required of them and why?
  – What will their housing look like? What is provided?
  – What support does/do family member(s) need? Language? School?
  – Set up a schedule in advance of their orientation to the campus, supervisors/advisors, etc.
  – Communicate to the students in the class ahead of the beginning of the class to inform them about the Scholar and go to the first class to introduce them.
  – Host a welcome to bring people they will work with most closely together with the Scholar.
  – Include them intentionally in the new instructor/faculty orientation.
  – Ask (or schedule per your department/institution) visits by department head or other designee to the classroom.
  – Provide an institutional liaison outside the chain of departmental command, and in addition to the International Scholar support.
  – Laptop? Access to library with instruction to use the resources?
  – Introductions to those in discipline to facilitate research collaboration
Engagement: Support the Scholar

• Consider How to Support Scholar in Their Research and Professional Development

  – Include them into the new instructor/lecturer/faculty training at the beginning of the semester

  – Encourage them to participate in the institutional training programs to support professional development

  – Support in your application financially the participation in conferences to advance their disciplinary knowledge/engagement

  – Encourage and support their engagement as an Outreach lecturer at other universities

  – Clarify their expectations for serving on faculty, including office hours, participation in events, etc.
Engagement: Support the Community

• Invite the Scholar to Participate in Local Community Outside the Campus
  – Share their presence.
  – Introduce them to cultural events and activities in intentional and hosted ways (Christmas, Parades and Local Festivals, Thanksgiving, Easter, Family)
  – Ask about their interest in connecting to faith-based groups and provide introductions as appropriate
  – Curate community needs/interests with scholar expertise to invite their involvement
    • Taught a short course in Arabic and North African Culture at local middle school
    • Spoke to Rotary Club and other organizations
    • Participated in local conferences
    • Featured speaker for International Education Week, in partnership with the SC Chapter of the Fulbright Organization
    • Speaker to undergraduate/graduate English majors (sociolinguistics)
    • Speaker to political science students (women’s rights and lives in Algeria; global political landscape in Arabic speaking nations)
Learning and Evaluation

- Deeply immersive contribution to our campus and community
- Supportive of launch of Arabic courses on our campus, with filled classes
- Developed research streams/collaborations with at least 5 Coastal Carolina University faculty
- Student evaluations were overwhelmingly positive in their evaluation.
  - One student, Mr. Joshua Parsons, was inspired to become one of the Arts and Humanities Global Experience Program ambassadors, traveled to the UK to participate in seminars hosted by Goldsmiths, University of London, and the Globe Theatre, and is continuing his work on Atheneaum Press projects related to global awareness and especially non-Western cultures.
  - Several students who took Dr. Zitouni’s core curriculum course on Languages Across Cultures have declared interest in specializing in World Literatures and some are applying for Fulbright Scholarships themselves.

Learning Moments

- Takes sometimes a long time to get all the paperwork complete so begin early!
- To avoid confusion and awkwardness, it may be helpful to hold a Skype conference in advance of arrival with Fulbright staff, Scholar, and host institution would be helpful to support clarity of logistics for new host institution, provide awareness of documentation the Scholar needs to complete upon arrival, and clarity on compensation matters.
